

Side 2: Kenny, Marcelus, Memo

MEMO

Si amigos! All great games go back to the Aztecs.

MARCELUS

Not baseball, made in America.

KENNY

Yeah.

MEMO

From an English game called cricket inspired by a similar game by the ancient Aztecs.

MARCELUS

I don't think so.

MEMO

(bluffing)

Si, es cierto! No one loved to compete more than my ancestors. I'm sure Quetzalcoatl himself was watching the greatest baseball game of all time, the 1998 pennant clincher when my San Diego Padres returned to the World Series.

KENNY

No way! The best game was when the Seattle Mariners beat the New York Yankees in five at the Kingdome in 1995.

MARCELUS

Yeah so why did both of your teams lose in the Worlds Series, which, by the way, was won in 1995 by my Atlanta Braves. Chipper Jones is the man!

KENNY

You've been dead too long. The "man" is Ken Griffey, Jr., the best player since Willie Mays. An awesome hitter.

MEMO

The best hitter played in San Diego, a mago named Tony Gwynn. Eight batting titles! But my favorite player is still Adrian Gonzales, a Mexican like me.

MARCELUS

I thought you were from San Diego.

MEMO

I was born in Texcoco near Mexico City, but moved to Tijuana as a young man to find work. That's where my daughter was born. Later I snuck into the United States with los coyotes.
